There are four animations in this pack. The first one is called "Waterfall". The main idea behind this animation is to be a portrait view of a person who is continuously running into a falling object and gets hurt. It is also seen as a good way of teaching motion capture to animators. The purpose of the demo version of this is to show how well it works in my previous demo: The next animation I made is called "Sketch". This animation is a sideways slingshot from side to side, you can either make this by hand, or make it a cgi system to work with as an object which moves sideways. I named this animation "Sketch" because of a typical sketch, because this is how a sketch should look. The third one is called "The Starburst". This is an animation where the object is in a 3D environment and it bursts into a star. This should take quite some time to animate. The last one is called "Wave". This is a slow wave form. It is seen as a way to create ocean waves on a computer. This is not nearly the best wave I could do, the closest ones are the ones that does a simple ripple. I tried to do a simulation with many of them, but sadly they aren't enough to create waves. You can also use this for your garden, a waterfall, or whatever. You can also create your own sketch objects, or if

System Requirements:

PCSX2 LE emulator with up to 5GB of RAM. I believe 4GB is the minimum needed. A laptop running Windows 7, 8, or 10 with a multi-core processor, at least 4GB of RAM, and preferably an SSD. A stable internet connection. A USB keyboard and mouse are strongly recommended. The USB ports on a laptop are almost always much faster than a PS2 keyboard and mouse. I don't recommend using a PS2 to PS2 adapter on the host computer. FAQ
