What's New in the Spelling Bee?

There is no time like the present. And no now like this one. The Spelling Bee is a new add-on for Type-II HTML editors, which would allow editors to insert and customize the text snippets known as Spelling Bees. The notations are nothing but how English should be spelled, the aim being to enhance user experience with the help of Spelling Bees. Types of Spelling Bees available: - All-in-one Spelling Bee - Partial Spelling Bee - One-Row Spelling Bee - Dictionary Spelling Bee - One-of-N Spelling Bee - Complete Spelling Bee Creating Spelling Bees: The editor provides five default Spelling Bees for users. First one is all-in-one Bee, that could be used to spell all the words appearing in the document. For example, if the document contains text such as Spitting image, user could select it and the all-in-one Bee would spell the words. The other four are so called partial Bees. User can choose any of the single words from the list and edit the text. The default partial Bees are one-of-N Bee, dictionary Bee, one-of-N Bee and complete Bee. The last Bee is a complete Bee in the sense it replaces the full sentence and the words are synonyms of the one that was entered. Arguably, there are more than 5 types of Spelling Bees. User could select them from the various tabs that are available in the Spelling Bee View panel, to see them spelled in the context that user is in.

Spelling Bee View: The dialog contains the various tabs to view, save, edit and apply Spelling Bees. The panel contains Spell Label, Spelling Bee Panel, Spelling Bee Edit Panel, Spelling Bee Style Panel and Spelling Bee List Panel.

Spell Label: The first and most critical panel is the Spell Label. User could choose any word to be used in the Spelling Bee. The button available next to the Spell Label panel allows users to add the word to a new Spelling Bee.

Spelling Bee Panel: The Spelling Bee Panel is where the word that was entered is being displayed. It is made of 4 rectangular boxes, 2 for the List and 2 for the Text. If the entry is actually a complete bee, a count of the Bee that is being used is displayed in the upper left corner.
