the creation of scripts to process files and relies on a built-in procedural language. Process documents based on scripts You can use this application to perform multiple text editing operations on TXT, HTM, HTML and XML files. The program edits files based on processing rules defined in a script. the actions that can be executed.

Perform various text-editing operations The application can perform a wide array of operations on large amounts of documents loaded in the processing queue. For example, it is possible to insert custom headers and footers in selected text files, replace certain text values with other words or expressions, as well as sort and reformat text. Additionally, you can have the program count the number of lines in a file, analyze the frequency of certain words or completely remove empty lines from a text.

Furthermore, the application can perform various conversion operations. It can transform HTML to plain text, convert XML data to CSV format or generate SQL scripts from CSV data. increase its accessibility. Note that this utility requires the creation of processing scripts in a built-in procedural language. If you are not familiar with such operations, you should try a more user-friendly application. Overall, if you are looking for a comprehensive text editing and conversion tool that can process large amounts of files in one operation, you can try Xmarkup.
